CERTIFICATIONS THAT INSPIRE CONFIDENCE

The products in our collection carry a variety of environmental and quality certifications. Here's what they mean:

ecoecho®

To qualify as ecoecho®, a significant part of the product must live up to at least two of these environmental standards: resource efficiency, renewability, compostability or responsible sourcing.

The OK Compost label, from the certification body TÜV Austria, indicates that the product is suitable for industrial composting and meets the stringent requirements of the European standard EN 13432.

The Forest Stewardship Council® (FSC) certification ensures the product is made of wood from forests managed in an environmentally appropriate, socially beneficial and economically viable manner.

The Nordic Swan Ecolabel identifies the best products on the market from an environmental point of view. For instance, it confirms our stearin candles consist of 90% renewable materials and minimise soot emissions.

The RAL Quality Mark is awarded by the European Quality Association for Candles. It guarantees the candle burns cleanly, contains no hazardous materials, retains its shape and is safe and reliable.

CAN SOFT MATERIALS LIKE DUNILIN®, DUNISOFT® AND EVOLIN® HELP WITH THE INTELLIGIBILITY OF SPEECH AT THE TABLE?

"Yes, soft surfaces can help to optimise acoustic conditions at the table. This is an important consideration, as often tables are home to hard surfaces that can make conversations difficult to hear. Anything that helps makes speech easier to understand can be a big advantage - particularly for the elderly who face hearing challenges."

HOW CAN FESTIVE DECORATION HELP RESIDENTS STAY CONNECTED?

"Sometimes, residents can lose track of seasons, especially if they don't go outside much. Festive designs are a big help when it comes to keeping them engaged with the time of year and each other. And that can have a very positive knock-on effect for the whole care home."

WHAT MAKES DUNI LEDS A NEAT FIT FOR CARE HOMES?

"Our LEDs are safe in many ways. There is no flame so they meet any fire regulations. Plus, there is no cord, which can be a potential hazard. Of course, this means you can use them to bring cosy, ambient light to virtually any space, from bedrooms to lounges. What's more, they won't break if knocked to the ground."

MATILDA - THE STORY OF HOW BÄCKAHÄSTEN CUT FOOD WASTE IN HALF

1/3 of all food produced in the world – approximately 1.3 billion tonnes is wasted every year.

At Bäckahästen care home outside Trelleborg, in southern Sweden, unnecessary food waste is now a thing of the past. Since the introduction of the new ordering system – Matilda – many things have changed. A new way of planning and individually tailored orders have paved the way for both enjoyable and sustainable meals.

It's Friday afternoon and approaching coffee time at Bäckahästen care home. The plates of cakes and biscuits are set out on the dining table and the residents arrive one by one to sit and enjoy a quiet moment. The plates have not been set down randomly. On the contrary, quite some planning has gone into today's choice of treats.

Matilda plays a major role in all this. But we're not talking about a member of staff here, as you might think. This is the name of a brand new ordering system that has been procured and specially adapted by dietitian Charlotte Thelander at Trelleborg Municipality.

"We started talking about food waste," explains Bäckahästen's General Manager, Margareta Lindquist. "We were throwing away a lot. The food was ordered in portions, and we often got more than the individual guest would eat. We wanted to find a way of reducing food waste, while at the same time making sure that our residents enjoy their meals. We were in close dialogue with the dietitian at the municipality, who eventually came back to us with an extremely well-developed idea."

NEW TIMES

The idea, named Matilda, is an ordering system that works as follows: an appointed contact at each care home receives a weekly menu that they then tailor to the wishes of the diners.

"Matilda has really changed our mealtimes for the better," says Jessica Persson, a healthcare assistant at Bäckahästen in charge of dealing with the meal orders. "Our residents now have a new level of choice and are able to take decisions about their meals. I talk to each of them before I place the order, so I can check what kind of sides they want and how much food they think they'll eat. A fish dish comes with a choice of rice, potatoes or mash, for example, and all the residents have their preferences. We used to throw away so much of these side dishes, But now the residents are eating better and we've cut our food waste by half. That feels fantastic!"

Jessica has been working with Matilda for a year so far. All the orders are placed for two weeks at a time, using special software. And although the system is easy to use now, the preparations for its introduction had to be meticulous.

"When we first started everything was new, and the switch didn't just affect those of us who work here. The residents also had to be brought on board," continues Margareta. "We're kind of a pilot project. We began by attending a training course, and then we've had constant follow-up with the dietitian at the municipality."

"Our residents now have a new level of choice and are able to take decisions about their meals. As a result we've cut our food waste by half. That feels fantastic!"

MARGARETA LINDQUIST, GENERAL MANAGER AT BÄCKAHÄSTEN

IMPORTANT CONVERSATIONS

Matilda is brought up early on when residents move in. Conversations take place before the move itself about what a guest does and doesn't like. "Then we follow up on this, as tastes can change. Suddenly someone who has never eaten fish before might want to eat fish."

Thanks to the new way of ordering, the diners express more of their own preferences. And food that was once thrown away is now put to use.

"We utilise the food in a whole different way," explains Jessica. "Leftovers like meatballs, for example, are turned into a filling for sandwiches at breakfast the next day. And we do the same with herring and eggs."

A LANGUAGE EVERYONE UNDERSTANDS

Working with Matilda has also involved a close dialogue with the central kitchen, with everything recorded and measured. A joint follow-up procedure has brought about a much better mutual understanding.

"We now speak the same language and we understand each other better when we discuss portion sizes and preferences. We're working towards the same goal, which has also led to improved efficiency and once again - less food waste," continues Margareta.

The residents also get to have their say by giving feedback.

"Everything is so different now, there's been a huge change!" Jessica adds. "Before, the food came in big portions, everything looked the same and there was no choice. With the new system, you can really see how residents are eating everything on their plate. And the staff are much more aware, too. We don't serve up as much and we keep a closer eye on what each person eats."

As part of its ongoing development, Matilda is currently awaiting an update that includes the option to specify whether the food is to be served hot or cold. And the system gives a much clearer picture about what foods go down well.

"Mashed potato is really popular! Pasta too. Spaghetti Bolognese. Macaroni. And veggie burgers!"
